Programme on Trade Based Money Laundering

Trade-Based Money Laundering (TBML) is recognized by Financial Action Task Force (FATF) as one of the key mechanisms by which criminals move money globally to disguise unscrupulous origins and integrate it back into the formal economy. The Government of India also sees TBML as one of the main methods through which cross border movement of proceeds from criminal and illegal activities is possible. Following reports of money laundering involving major banks in India, the Reserve Bank of India has increased efforts to strengthen the regulatory framework for identification and prevention of trade based money laundering. In this scenario, it is very important for banks and financial institutions involved in international trade transactions import export financing to stay vigilant and alert, with the compliances in place to prevent trade based money laundering.

The institute is offering this programme to help officers to understand the complexities and preventive measures for trade based money laundering.
