

Programme on Lending to Large and Mid-Corporate

Needless to emphasize, bank credit to productive sectors of the economy has a critical role in sustaining economic growth. Indian Economy is expected to grow at 7.5 per cent in the year 2016-17. As a rule of thumb the financial sector has to have a growth rate of two-and-a-half times the general economy to meet the credit requirements. But, the banking sector is currently facing one of the tough times. High stress to banks are emanating from deterioration in corporate balance sheets. Net flows to the industrial sector slowed markedly to 2.7 per cent – from 5.6 per cent a year ago – reflecting the stress in the larger constituents such as infrastructure, construction, petroleum and coal. Stalling of projects in the power and road segments and dwindling cash flows which affected the quality of bank assets deterred new lending to infrastructure. Basic metal and metal products, chemicals and chemical products, and textiles, on the other hand, absorbed higher credit flows. Thus, efforts have to be redoubled to free up credit flows to the productive sectors of the economy so that growth is supported.

However, the lending environment in which the banks operate has become extremely competitive. While the borrower expectations are rising, the volatile interest rate environment is placing heavy burden on bank's spread. Due to increasing borrower defaults, it is very important for banks to be proactive in taking lending decisions. In light of Basel II, proper assessment of credit risk and continuous monitoring of loans are crucial issues. However, the Indian banking system is financially stable and resilient to the shocks that may arise due to higher non-performing assets (NPAs) and the global economic crisis, according to a stress test done by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI). Despite this, the officers working in the credit area need to be properly equipped with the latest tools and techniques of credit risk analysis, risk measurement and management, with particular reference to risk and return framework.

The objectives of the programme are to empower banks to scan and monitor business environment and identify lending opportunities, use financial and non-financial appraisal techniques, and manage lending relationship in mutual interest. The case studies developed by NIBM for appraisal and structuring of corporate loans form the basis of the programme.
