Programme on Enhancing Bank Employees' Performance and Wellbeing Through Leadership, Justice, Support, and Spirituality

A bank branch, bank region, and bank zone are various levels of bank organisational units. The effectiveness of an organisational unit such as a bank branch, bank region, and bank zone can be improved by enhancing the performance and wellbeing of all employees in that particular organisational unit. This programme can help senior level bank managers to identify and implement various actions to enhance performance and wellbeing of employees in their banking organisation unit such as a bank branch, bank region, and bank zone. Therefore, this programme will be useful for bank branch managers, senior level managers in various bank verticals, and senior level managers in regional and zonal offices of banks.

According to research findings, the presence of organisational justice, organisational support, transformational leadership, and workplace spirituality in an organisation can potentially enhance employee performance and employee wellbeing. This programme will provide research-based knowledge in practice-relevant and action-oriented manner so that bank managers can improve organisational justice, organisational support, transformational leadership, and workplace spirituality in their banking organisation unit such as a bank branch, bank region, and bank zone in order to enhance the performance and wellbeing of employees in their banking organisation unit.

Participants' Feedback on Past Similar Training Programmes

For the six training programmes on enhancing employee performance and wellbeing through leadership, justice, support, and spirituality conducted at the NIBM campus over the last about two years for managers from banking organisations, Dr. Badrinarayan Pawar singlehandedly taught all sessions in these programmes. The participant feedback reports for these six programmes indicate that 85 out of 90 sessions conducted by Dr Pawar received session ratings of 4.8, 4.9, or 5 out of 5 (5 = "Excellent", which is the highest possible rating).

Further, in the participant feedback reports, three of these six programmes also received the highest possible "Overall Assessment of EDP" rating of 5 out of 5 (5 = "Excellent", which is the highest possible rating). The qualitative feedback comments of some of the managerial level participants also indicate that they received learning benefits which they can apply at their workplaces. The participants in these past programmes included bank managers from various levels such as Branch Manager, Senior Manager, Chief Manager, Assistant General Manager, Deputy General Manager, Vice President, General Manager, and Chief General Manager.

Additionally, in August 2016, Dr Badrinarayan Pawar conducted a training programme on enhancing employee performance and wellbeing through leadership, justice, support, and spirituality for the managers of Bank of Ceylon in Colombo which also received positive feedback.

Likely Benefits of the Programme for Banks

Based on the programme inputs, bank managers can design an action plan to enhance the performance and wellbeing of employees in their banking organisation so as to improve the effectiveness of their banking organisation unit such as a bank branch, bank region, and bank zone.

Objectives

These include:

- To facilitate bank managers' development of comprehensive understanding of employee performance and employee wellbeing.
- To help bank managers explore ways of enhancing transformational leadership of themselves and of managers in their banking organisation.
- To help bank managers explore ways of creating conditions of organisational justice, organisational support, and workplace spirituality in their banking organisation.
- To facilitate bank managers' understanding of how the programme inputs will help them enhance employee performance and wellbeing in their banking organisation.
- To facilitate bank managers' development of an action plan for enhancing performance and wellbeing of the employees in their banking organisation.
