Programme on Customer Relationship Management in Banking

In today's competitive scenario, banks can no longer take customer loyalty and profitability for granted. This can be attributed to rising competition, technological advancement and an empowered customer. Customer Relationship Management (CRM) has, thus, become inevitable for growth and profitability. CRM practices help to generate better understanding of the customer for product development, segmentation, appropriate targeting, campaign management and maintenance of long-term profitable and mutually beneficial relationships with customers.

A general observation in the banking scenario in this context is, that though CRM software is installed, the intended pay-offs are not being realised. The understanding, acceptance and widespread implementation of CRM applications is an area to be strengthened. Customer Relationship Management is a strategic initiative which has organisation-wide implications. In the banking industry, CRM is still at a nascent stage. A very small proportion of its potential has been utilised. Moreover, it has been implemented on a limited scale. Full-scale integration of CRM encompasses several issues of technology, organisation structure and training. Core Banking Solutions (CBS), increasing number of customer touch-points, KYC norms and seeding Aadhar number, etc. have enabled access to significant customer information which can be utilised for segmenting, targeting, cross-selling, and customisation.

There is an immense opportunity for banks to capitalize on this and gain a competitive advantage. The captioned programme has therefore, been designed to highlight the importance of CRM in banking. Issues in implementation, challenges and how to seek customer response to it will also be discussed at length.

Pedagogy

The programme pedagogy will involve interactive lectures, case analysis, panel discussion and group presentations in addition to practical orientation through interaction with banking professionals and technology experts.
